An End to Bed-Fall Injuries

SERIOUS INJURIES sustained from bed-falls are very common, especially in those who suffer from dementia and other neurological disorders. Any bed-fall incident can be very distressing for both carer and patient and traditional methods of management such as restraint with cot-sides or a mattress on the floor are now generally considered to be unacceptable.

Until now, even the lowest 'ultra-lo' beds were too high to offer a viably safe alternative.

With its easy-to-use, lockable handset control, the new LC600 falls-prevention bed can be positioned at any height from floor-level to 70cm. Specially designed for residential / domestic use, the LC600 is the latest bed from Bartrams Healthcare, suppliers of the world's lowest acute-care hospital bed, the 'Protean'. Designed with a versatile, electrically operated raising backrest, knee-break and tilt function, the LC600 can be effortlessly set into a comfortable 'chair' position, even when down at its lowest level, offering the user ultimate comfort and safety.

Available to buy (or to hire at a low daily rate), the new LC600 virtually eliminates the risk of a bed-fall injury.

Canterbury Care & Heat Electric

CANTERBURY CARE Group has registered care homes in England and Scotland. The group recently expanded its portfolio with two Glasgow homes both of which had night storage heaters that generated heat throughout the day regardless of residents' needs.

"We have a gas supply to both buildings but with concrete floors, installing a traditional central heating system would have been costly and time consuming," explains Tony Stein, joint owner of Canterbury Care.

Heat Electric's range of Low Surface Temperature electric water-filled radiators were an obvious solution providing an energy efficient, easy to install and maintenance free heating solution. A Heat Electric LST radiator won't exceed an external temperature of 43°C, is easily wall mounted on brackets and requires no central boiler or pipework. Specified in hundreds of care homes, libraries, public buildings and schools across the country, the radiators meet strict Government guidelines while reducing heating bills and carbon emissions.
